

Good Research Practice during Doctoral Studies

Objective

- How should research results be documented?
- What is the right way to cite?
- How does one handle image sources?

Answers to questions about working correctly are provided in the eLearning course „Good Research Practice During Doctoral Studies“.

Description

GRADE has designed this course to be interdisciplinary and has provided a review of additional topics regarding doctoral work:

- How to wisely plan and organize the research project
- Which legal aspects, such as in labour law or copyright law, are relevant for doctoral candidates.

Five modules are available, containing comprehensive information, tests to check the knowledge gained, as well as supplementary information materials.

Completing all the modules takes about 60 minutes. You can interrupt the course at any time, recover your previous progress or repeat modules. At the end, you will have the possibility to receive a certificate.

Organizational Information

Language / Format	English / Online
Target group	Doctoral Candidates at all stages and Postdocs from all faculties
Duration	Approx. 1 hour
Access	http://tinygu.de/GWP