

Keys to Understanding Animal Law in Japan

An Analysis of the Most Protected and the Least Protected Animals

Thursday, December 15, 2016, 16:00–18:00

University of Zurich, Room RAA E-29, Rämistrasse 59, 8001 Zurich

Guest Lecture by Honjo Moe (Hitotsubashi University, Tokyo)

Honjo Moe is a Doctoral candidate of the Graduate School of Law at Hitotsubashi University in Tokyo, and a part-time lecturer in animal welfare law at Teikyo University of Science. She received a Bachelor's Degree in law from Kyoto University and finished a double master degree in Animal Law LL.M. and Environmental and Natural Resources Law LL.M. at Lewis & Clark Law School in the United States. Her research focuses on animal welfare law, related especially to laboratory animal, farm animal and companion animal with a comparative perspective of Japan, the EU and the U.S.